Senate Refuscs To Change Farm Parity Formula

Meandering Along the Main Stem

By WASH FAYETTE

Every home is asked to produce its old unused flat keys and donate them to the government. Nickel-silver will be produced from them for use in the manufacture of guns for the nation's armed forces.

Some school child will call at your home for your package of old keys tomorrow evening, between six and seven o'clock, if you live in the city.

If you live on a farm or in one of Fayette County's villages send your old keys to your nearest schoolhouse, if some one does not call for them.

The school houses of the city and county are being made collection depots for these keys on October 1. The keys assembled there will be shipped out to the proper destination through Maynard Craig, executive director of the Citizens Service Corps of the Fayette County Civilian Defense Council.

The all-out effort of America to win the war and do it as quickly as possible, has brought about some radical changes in the lives of a host of citizens in this community.

Particularly is this true among the many hundreds of persons who are employed—at Wright and Patterson Fields, local industries where factories are working round the clock on war orders, as well as in other plants where night and day shifts are kept busy.

At all hours in the night one may see persons engaged in such work, going to or coming from their work, and usually autos are filled with workers as owners of cars have doubled up in furnishing transportation.

As a result of this working on day and night shifts, workmen are on the move almost constantly, and this will continue indefinitely.

I have just learned that Bloomingburg has eleven colored boys in the U. S. armed forces, four of them are brothers and two more in the same family took the screen test the past week. Three brothers in another family and two in a third family are in the service.

The Stewart boys head the list. Their father is dead and their mother is in a hospital.

Corporal Arthur Stewart is at Fort Riley, Kas.; first class private, Albert Stewart, is at Camp Grayfield, Selma, Ala.; Private Floyd Stewart, Camp Dix, N. J., and Private Cecil Stewart, Camp Shelby, Miss.

Earl Stewart and George Ryan, half-brothers, took the screen test the past week and passed. A seventh brother, 17, remains at Bloomingburg.

Then there are the Gray brothers—three of them—Corporal Leroy Gray, is at Indian Town Gap, Pa.; Leonard Gray, is at Fort McClelland, Ala., and Eugene Gray at Fort Dix, N. J.

Maurice Halthcock is stationed at an air base at Florence (Muscle Shoals) Ala., and Earl Halthcock, his brother, is at Fort Bragg, N. C.

That's doing mighty well for the brothers.

Wilbur Ryan and Walter Campbell, also of Bloomingburg, are stationed at Fort McClelland, Ala.

BERLIN BOMBED 12 TIMES BY RUSSIANS LAST YEAR

MOSCOW, Sept. 30.—(P)—Russian bombers raided Berlin 12 times in the last year and dropped "thousands of bombs" on 20 other German cities and 13 cities in Hungary, Rumania and Poland, the Moscow radio said today.

The Russians used two and four-engined bombers capable of flying more than 12 hours and covering from 1,300 to 3,300 miles non-stop, the broadcast said.

COST OF LABOR NOT FIGURED IN PRICE CURB

Farm Bloc Surrenders Its Advantage Gained When Change Was Voted

ADEQUATE WAGE PROVIDED

Eight-day Controversy Is Ended with Approval Of Compromise Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(P)—The Senate voted today to strip from the Administration's anti-inflation legislation a provision changing farm parity standards, inserting instead a compromise amendment directing the lifting of farm price ceilings where they did not reflect labor and other cost increases since January 1, 1941.

The amendment was offered by Democratic Leader Barkley, of Kentucky.

The vote was 86 to 4. It would require that an "adequate wage" should be accorded to farm labor in computing the increased costs over those prevailing on January 1, 1941, which farmers have had to bear in producing crops.

Its adoption ended an eight-day controversy between the Administration and the Senate Farm Bloc over terms governing the proposed directive to President Roosevelt to stabilize prices, wages and salaries at September 15 levels.

In going along with the revised Barkley proposal, the Farm Bloc surrendered an advantage it gained yesterday when it forced insertion into the bill of a provision requiring the recalculation of present parity standards upwards to include farm labor costs.

A similar amendment, to which President Roosevelt has said he was "unalterably opposed," previously had been written into the anti-inflation measure when it passed the House.

As previously drawn, the Barkley amendment would require the President to take farm labor and other costs into account if ceilings proved too low, but would

WAR BOND JACK POT HIT IN KNOX COUNTY

Total of $300,000 Sold in One-day Rally

MOUNT VERNON, Sept. 30.—(P)—Knox Countians, if you hadn't noticed, tilted chins a trifle higher today. And small wonder!

They bought $300,000 in War Bonds and Stamps in a 12-hour span yesterday. It was Knox County Victory Bond Day.

This county seat became a carnival town as go-getters set out to see an original quota of $100,000 in U. S. A. shares. Shucks, in four hours this was history. And two hours later sales soared above $200,000. A sprightly cocker spaniel pup brought the top bid at a farm product auction—bonds totaling $1,300.

Five thousand persons participated in a gala parade.

Allied Offense On New Guinea Sets Japs Back

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, Australia, Sept. 30.—(P)—Allied mountain troops, sifting through the difficult jungle and mountain country of the Owen Stanley Range, have captured the first objective of their New Guinea offensive and sent the Japanese into a hurried northward retreat, a communique said today.

Consolidating their positions on Ioribaiwa Ridge, which was retaken from the enemy, the Allied troops are pursuing the Japanese toward Nauro, ten miles north of the ridge, where the Japanese have established new defense positions.

With the conquest of Ioribaiwa Ridge, which the Japanese had prepared for defense with barricades and field trenches, the Allies have started successfully the difficult task of driving the enemy back over the 88-mile trail to Buna and erase his threat to the Allied advance base at Port Moresby.

"Our advance continues," General MacArthur's communique said.

The Japanese abandoned many supplies, a military spokesman said, but added this could not be taken as an indication they were routed.

Allied bombers pursued the retreating Japanese and pounded their rear positions at Menari, four miles north of Nauro.

At the same time heavy bombers moved down the trail to Buna and destroyed six barges used to transport supplies down the coast. Other enemy installations on the beach and airdrome also were attacked.

Another Allied air unit struck at Salamaua, large Japanese base up the New Guinea coast from Buna, bombing the airfield and dispersal areas. Results of the attack could not be observed.

AMERICAN PLANES ARE CALLED 'TOPS'

Critics Answered by Group After Investigation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(P)—A quiet investigation into the quality of American-built army aircraft was reported authoritatively today to have left a House military subcommittee well satisfied with both the performance and protection of the planes.

Details of the committee's findings, based upon statistics and combat examples submitted by high army and air force officials in executive session, will be made public in a week or two in answer to charges that the army aircraft are inadequate.

One member of the committee, declining use of his name, declared that the army ships "are tops," while Rep. Brooks (D-Ala.), also on the committee, asserted flatly that "we've got some of the best planes in the world."

SOVIET ATTACK ON NAZI FLANK IS STILL RAGING

Germans Admitted Driving Deeper into Stalingrad; Savage Resistance Met

RUSSIANS HOLD OIL FIELD

Nazis Continue To Pour in Fresh Troops in Spite Of Terrific Losses

By ROGER D. GREENE
(By The Associated Press)

Soviet headquarters reported today that the Red armies, surging down upon the German left flank, had defeated two Nazi divisions along the flaming 40-mile corridor between the Don and Volga rivers, while inside Stalingrad the crisis remained acute.

A bulletin from German field headquarters said a new section of northern Stalingrad had been taken by storm.

Despite staggering losses, the Germans continued to throw great masses of troops into the 37-day-old assault, and the Army newspaper Red Star declared gravely: "Conditions in the city remain serious. The Germans have big losses, but the attacks do not lessen and violence grows."

Nevertheless, the Russians still displayed no sign of collapse after withstanding more than five weeks of violent assault. And as September ended, confidence rose in both Soviet and British quarters in London that the Red armies had blighted Hitler's two most cherished aims of 1942:

1. A new onslaught against Moscow.

2. Conquest of Russia's rich Tiflis-Baku oil region.

Soviet war news, published by the Russian embassy in London, declared that after "having lost several dozen picked divisions, squandered several thousand tanks and planes and strewn every captured mile with their own dead, the Germans have failed to achieve victory."

Soviet gunners were reported to have slaughtered more than 1,500 Germans yesterday as the invaders launched repeated, futile attacks to widen a wedge in Stalingrad's northwest section.

Dispatches to the Soviet newspaper Comsomol Pravda declared that "the initiative remains in our hands" on the northwest steps, although the Germans were reported massing tremendous forces to replace defeated divisions.

On the central (Moscow) front, Russians shock troops marshalled in such secrecy that they were not allowed to smoke were reported to have cut through the "line of the Fuehrer" above Rzhnev, 130 miles northwest of Moscow, in an attack launched after a barrage by hundreds of guns.

Pravda dispatches said the Russians were apparently the system heavily fortified defenses erected by the Germans for the past 11 months around Rzhnev, a key Nazi stronghold. Trenches, underground communications, mine fields, wire barricades and three lines of fire points guarded the zone.

Far to the south, in the Caucasus, strong Red Army forces were reported to have stemmed a series of attacks by reinforced German columns seeking to break down through the Terek Valley toward the Grozny oil fields.

Hitler Again Promises Victory
As Campaign for Relief Opened

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), Sept. 30.—(P)—Adolf Hitler told his people today that "I believe that we shall continue to defeat our enemies until final victory is ours."

He assured the German nation that Stalingrad was bound to fall.

Hitler's address, his customary winter relief campaign speech to the Nazi party, was made in the packed sportsplatz and broke a five months' silence.

(On the same occasion last Oct. 4, Hitler told the Nazis that "now it can be declared that the enemy already is broken and will never rise again."

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, with 10,000 German wounded, was in the galaxy of top Nazi leaders in the huge sports arena to hear Hitler.

Surprised by his return from North Africa, the crowd earlier had greeted him with tumultuous cheers and Hitler emphasized

St. Louis 'Gas House Gang' Held Scoreless Until Last Inning, Then Open Up with Barrage of Hits To Make On eof Most Thrilling Finishes in World Series History

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, St. Louis, Sept. 30.—(P)—The New York Yankees slugged out a 7 to 4 victory over the fighting St. Louis Cardinals in the opening game of the World Series today, but only after the National Leaguers had put on one of the most thrilling finishes in the history of the classic to score all their runs after two were out in the ninth inning.

Red Ruffing, 38-year-old Yankee righthander, was on the verge of pitching one of the great games of baseball history when the Red Birds fell on him maffer two were out in the final frame, drove him from the mound under a terrific barrage of hits and pushed across four runs before Spud Chandler finally stopped them.

The bases were loaded with Cardinals, the tying run on first, when Stan Musial, Card rookie, grounded out to first to end the game and send 34,385 fans home hoarsely yelling to themselves.

Up to the time he was blasted, however, Ruffing already had set a World Series record by pitching seven and two thirds innings of hitless ball. The victory was Ruffing's seventh in World Series, constituting another record.

The Cards received a standing ovation as they strolled out from their dugout for batting practice. With Coacker Triplett, reserve outfielder, serving them up, the

Fourth Inning—Yankees

DiMaggio lashed a single between Marion and Kurowski.

Keller popped to Marion. Gordon raised a high pop fly that Hopp took.

Dickey walked. Hasset lined a double down the left field foul line scoring DiMaggio and sending Dickey to third.

Ruffing was thrown out by Marion. One run, two hits, no errors, two left.

Fourth Inning—Cardinals

Musial flied to Keller.

W. Cooper sent a long fly into left center and it was taken by DiMaggio although he juggled the ball.

Hopp struck out. No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Fifth Inning—Yankees

Rizzuto bunted down the first baseline and Hopp took it and stepped on the bag for the out.

Rolfe singled. Cullenbine doubled off the right field wall, sending Rolfe to third.

DiMaggio sent a bouncer to Kurowski who tagged Cullenbine but his throw to first was too late to catch DiMaggio and Rolfe scored on the play.

Keller was thrown out by Brown. (Please Turn to Page Two)

THE WAR TODAY

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
British Offense-minded Observer Finds—War Has Changed Average Citizen

EDITOR'S NOTE: DeWitt Mackenzie, widely known war analyst, now is in London after a trans-Atlantic flight and the following is his first article on observing wartime Britain. He will proceed to other war zones, when governments and news developments permit.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—The most important thing your correspondent can report from his initial glance at this wartime Britain is that John Bull and his wife and youngsters—that is, the civilian rank and file—not only are amazingly fit but grimly anxious to get speedily ahead with the bloody work before them.

The spirit of offensive is everywhere. This is the first chance I have had to size up Britain at close range since January, 1939. That was soon after little Czechoslovakia was sent to the sacrificial altar by the Munich appeasement pact and less than a year before the Hitlerian Frankenstein cut loose his monster on an unprepared world.

One had expected to find changes, of course, but here is a great metamorphosis of the man in the street.

Here is a new John Bull—and I know my Briton, having been with him in war and peace through long years in many parts of the globe.

Small things often signal big developments. At the risk of being called fanatical, I'm going to confess to being mightily impressed during the short time I've been here at an odd circumstance: I haven't seen a single fat, or even plump, person.

Now, that is a matter of importance when you figure why, for while Britons as a whole don't run to avoidpoids, there always have been plenty of stout persons about, and the traditional John Bull is ample of waist.

I don't mean to picture a people gaunt from hunger. They're well enough fed, though on pretty tight rations. But the whole population has trained down to the fineness of athletes.

I get the impression, too, that the people might be overtrained. They have been so long set, tensely waiting for the word to go get Hitler, that they are beginning to suffer a bit from the strain like a runner poised for a tardy-starting gun.

That is a condition which can only be cured when the Allies are ready for all-out offensive action. I was waffled into the midst of this New Britain on the wings of a transatlantic clipper.

As we came down in this streamlined Britain, I couldn't help a backward glance at my first arrival here in January, 1918, during the last world war. Back in those primitive days we had wallowed across the Atlantic in a funny little tub of 6,000 tons.

Then, as now, the Allied cause was fairly battered.

General Sir Douglas Haig, who later was to become Field Marshal Lord Haig, had just replaced General Sir John French as British commander in chief in France. The Gallipoli campaign just had ended in festering disaster. A few months later the Kaiser was to inaugurate the submarine campaign which all but cost the Allies the war.

Then, as now, the people of Britain were grimly determined to see it through.

But there was a vast difference in the circumstances. The war was far away—just as it is to us in America today.

True, there was some enemy bombing of Britain and casualties rolled back from the front. Still—fighting was overseas, and civilians did not get the feel of it. In this day of blitzkriegs and 8,000-pound bombs and huge clippers that span oceans, however, the war is to be carried into every town and home. The individual doesn't go to war. The war comes to him.

The sum of all this is that when the Allied high command feels the time has arrived to open that fiercely debated second front, the British people will be ready to jump to the guns.

So far as the troops are concerned, they long have been fretting to see action.

STATE CONCLAVE

Platform and Policies for Coming Campaign To Be Drafted

Leaders in the Republican organization in Fayette County today were in the state capital to take part in the work of drafting the platform and outlining the principles on which the campaign for the November elections will be made.

Roy Carr, the chairman of the county executive committee, Gene McLean, chairman of the central committee and W. Stanley Paxson, the party's candidate for state representative, were the delegates to the convention which was to be brought to a close by Wednesday night.

With the delegates went other active Republicans from both Washington C. H. and the county. Among them were Hon. Warren W. Williams, representative to the General Assembly and Glenn B. Rodgers, a former county chairman.

The Ohio Federation of Women's Republican Organizations wound up its affairs Tuesday and the delegates from here were back home, already laying plans for their part in the forthcoming campaign.

The Fayette County delegation, headed by Mrs. Edgar Snyder, the county chairwoman, included Miss Edith Gardner, Mrs. Glenn B. Rodgers, Miss Grace Van Winkle and Mrs. Gilbert Adams.

In the Republican "streamlined" platform convention party leaders said that by elimination of various non-essentials previously a part of such meetings it would be possible to conclude the convention by tonight.

Gov. John W. Bricker, who last night told the Republican women's organizations that women deserve tribute for their role in the war, will keynote the convention. Major Norman Imrie of Columbus is temporary chairman, and Rep. Thomas A. Jenkins of Ironton will speak in behalf of Republican congressional candidates.

Some spokesmen said that the platform, the central theme of which is expected to be a pledge for all-out cooperation in prosecution of the war, would be the shortest in party history.

Bricker, who is seeking reelection, asserted in his convention-eve speech that the party was more dependent than ever upon women's organizations because wartime restrictions prevented large gatherings. It is up to them, he added, to make a person-to-person campaign appeal.

DEBATE DATE SET

Gov. John W. Bricker said today he had reserved Saturday, October 31, for a debate at Cleveland with John McSweeney, his Democratic opponent for governor in the November 3 election.

Bricker has been charged by some democrats with refusing to debate campaign issues.

ARMY OFFICER
GIVES WARNING
AT ROTARY CLUB

'It Can Happen Here,' Is His
Inference in Discussion
Of Air Raid Precautions

"The life of one curly haired child saved in your community by advance precautions and preparations in civilian defense, if an enemy air raid ever occurs here, will be worth all the effort that any of you people make when you are asked to do something toward helping in civilian defense work."

Such was the warning and the challenge spoken before members of the Rotary Club at their regular weekly luncheon by Col. Earl Brannon of the office of Adjutant General of Ohio, at Columbus.

Col. Brannon is one of the directing executives in this office in charge of the Ohio State Guard and also has important duties in the state setup for civilian defense in which the state guard is an important link.

The speaker painted a rather gloomy picture of the global war situation, calling attention without sugar-coated words, to the fact that the cause of the Allied nations has been facing defeat for nine months and declaring "who knows but what the shadows of our past losses may be a forecast of things to come to us here?" He declared that the foremost military minds of the world insist that the military decision in this war still hangs perilously in the balance and that the tragedy which China, Russia and other nations have undergone may be repeated in United States.

Col. Brannon briefly sketched the dark picture which war holds before this nation and made an impassioned plea for all people of every community to rise to meet the responsibility which rests upon each one of us. "I wonder," he said, "how you people of Fayette County, and other similar communities over the nation, have made use of the precious minutes - and hours gained, so that you could prepare yourselves, by those be-draggled, blood-stained, weary men of our forces in Bataan, Corregidor, Wake Island and other such places? They fought, died and went to concentration camps for you. When you are asked to do something to help yourself, how many of you respond either willingly or at all?"

Col. Brannon told his audience how vital morale was to the soldier. He declared it was the spark which in battle was even more important than weapons. The soldier who knows that his people back home are being protected, goes into the fight with higher morale and often with a song on his lips. Much of his worry is gone if he thinks his wife, children and parents are being given the best possible protection. Much of this protection depends on how well all of you are doing your part toward civilian defense, and he knows that. How many of you are 'letting him down?' " he asked.

A high compliment was paid to the local Ohio State Guard Company by Col. Brannon, who said that the officers of this unit and some of the men in it, have many valuable years of military service to their credit, which was proving invaluable in getting this organization into first class shape. He further stated that rapidly changing conditions whereby some of these company members were being called into regular military service was depleting the company's personnel and it might not be long until other men of this community may be called upon to take their places. "This home guard," he said, "is to be our last line of defense."

Seventh Inning—Yankees
Rizzuto raised a high fly which Musial caught.
Slaughter ran back almost to the right field wall to take Rolfe's fly.
Cullenbine grounded out to Hopp.
No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Seventh Inning—Cardinals
Hopp flied to Keller.
Kurovski struck out.
Marion popped foul to Hassett.
No runs, no hits, no errors, none left.

Eighth Inning—Yankees
DiMaggio smashed a ground single into center for his third hit of the game.
Keller was called out on three consecutive strikes.
Gordon also struck out.
Dickey singled to right sending DiMaggio to third.
Hassett lined a single over Brown's outstretched glove scoring DiMaggio and sending Dickey to second.

Ruffing smashed a liner to right center and it scooted out of Slaughter's glove for a two-base error, scoring Dickey and Hassett. He did not get credit for a run batted in. Cooper was replaced by Gumbert, a right-hander, who has won 9 games and lost 5.

Rizzuto bounced to Gumbert and was thrown out.
Only one of the Yankee runs in the eighth was earned.

Three runs, three hits, one error, one left.
Eighth Inning—Cardinals
Harry Walker batted for Gumbert.
Walker struck out, twisting clear to the ground on the last pitch.

Rizzuto ran back into left field to take Brown's fly.
By going seven and two thirds innings without yielding a hit Ruffing set a World Series record exceeding the seven and one third frames of hitless ball pitched by Herb Pennoch of the New York Yankees in 1927 and Monte Pearson of the Yanks in 1935.

However, T. Moore singled sharply to right on the next play.
Slaughter flied deep to DiMaggio.
No runs, one hit, no errors, one left.

Ninth Inning—Yankees
Lanier who had won 13 and lost 8, went to the mound for St. Louis.
Rolfe singled to right.
Cullenbine bunted down the third baseline and Lanier fielded the ball, threw wild over Hopp's head letting Cullenbine go all the way to third and scoring Rolfe. It was a sacrifice and an error and no run batted in.
Lanier took DiMaggio's smash and threw him out.
Keller worked a full count and then walked.
Lanier tried to pick Keller off first unsuccessfully and when Hopp returned the ball to the pitcher Lanier let it get away from him and Cullenbine scored from third. Keller was held on first.

It was an error for Lanier on the play in which Cullenbine scored.
Gordon struck out.
Dickey grounded out to Hopp, unassisted.

Both Yankee runs in the ninth were unearned.
Two runs, one hit, two errors, one left.

Ninth Inning—Cardinals
Musial's pop foul was caught by Dickey.
W. Cooper smashed a basehit off Rolfe's glove.
Hopp flied to Keller.
Sander batted for Kurovski and walked.
Marion tripled into the right field corner scoring W. Cooper and Sander.
O'Dea batted for Lanier and singled into center field scoring Marion.
Crispi ran for O'Dea.
Brown lined a single into short center, Crispi holding up at second.
Ruffing was replaced by Chandler.
T. Moore singled sharply to left scoring Crispi and sending Brown to second.
Slaughter hit a grounder that took a bad bounce and hit Rizzuto directly in the face. He was unable to make a play and it was scored as a hit filling the bases.
Musial grounded out, Hassett to Chandler who covered first.
Four runs, five hits, no errors.

SECOND FRONT DISCORD
The misunderstanding between Moscow, on the one hand, and London and Washington on the other, about a second land front in Europe is distressing but not at all surprising. It has seemed inevitable ever since the London-Washington announcement last June that the three United Nations were in agreement as to "the urgent task of creating a second front in Europe in 1942."

Obviously this was one of those matters on which the public could not be given even the vaguest hint as to details. Speculation, therefore, spread in all directions in the free press of Britain and the United States.

In Russia the press is not free. Speculation there took the direction that the government considered wisest. Judging from reports, the Russians were given assurance that the Anglo-American forces definitely would come to their assistance by attacking Hitler from the rear—that is, from the west.

This situation and its statement involve no criticism of the Russian course. Quite apparently, as we now can see, those speculators were correct who considered the statement as a weapon in a war of nerves.

To the extent that the Russians' unfounded hope for a second land front may have contributed to the doggedness with which they have resisted Hitler's hordes this summer, perhaps the statement justified itself.

To the extent to which the Nazis were made uncertain whether we might attempt an invasion of the continent without proper preparation or adequate resources, the strategy may have helped Russia by keeping some Reich strength away from the eastern front for a time.

Nobody can blame the Russians, desperate as they are, for trying to induce us to come to their rescue on a second front. After all, Stalin's primary interest is in Russia—not in Britain, not the United States, not in the United Nations, and not in democracy. Self-preservation still is the first law of nature for nations as for individuals.

By the same token, nobody can find justified fault with the British and us for not committing national suicide by invading the Continent before we are properly prepared.

Starting from military naked scratch, with all our irritating and discouraging failures we have done a fairly good job of arming. We are nearly ready to translate local petty offensives into the beginning of a grand sweep that, in course of time, will destroy totalitarianism completely.

If Russia can hold out for what now

Washington at a Glance

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Since Republican candidates can't possibly campaign for congress on an anti-war platform, their position is that they're even more unqualifiedly anti-Axis than their party opponents are.

The declaration of principles, adopted late in September at a conference of their members in the house of representatives, did not exactly accuse the administration of "waste and inefficiency," but it did call on the government to terminate such evils and, if their existence wasn't assumed, it isn't very apparent how the folk at the helm could have been expected to end 'em.

What the G. O. P. lawmaker had in mind was made clear enough by Congressman Joseph W. Martin, their representative parliamentary leader, who presided over the conference in a reference to forces and influences that "persist in continuing so-called social and governmental reforms at the expense of our war effort."

In short, New Deal policies were too obviously meant not to be readily identifiable. They weren't attacked as New Dealers, however. The Republican utterance ignored the question of their long-run social and economic merits or demerits, but concentrated on the deplorability of distracting attention from our war activities by monkeying with 'em at this particular juncture.

Platform Is Tangible

Criticism of the same sort has been audible in individual speeches by aspirants for election or re-election in November, but the latest utterance is in the nature of a pretty generally-agreed-on platform, subscribed to, with but a very few exceptions, by all G. O. P. members of Capitol Hill's lower legislative chamber. How it will take with the voter remains to be seen on election day.

Personally I've no doubt that its signers were perfectly sincere in proclaiming the whole-heartedness of their devotion to the democracies' cause against the Axis. That some of 'em weren't rather glad of an opportunity to stir a bit of anti-New Deal sentiment into it, perhaps isn't so certain, though.

The election day fight will be for seats in the lower house, of course. The Democrats already have so large a majority in the senate that the Republicans can't win a margin there if they are victorious in every one of the one-third of memberships at stake in November, and it goes without saying that they won't score any considerable proportion of that number.

Theoretically they can gain control of the lower house, since its total membership is chosen or rechosen biennially, all at a clatter.

Even that's highly improbable, it would require so large a turnover. A few G. O. P. representatives' additions won't be surprising, however. The Republicans now occupy only such berths as are almost irrevocably held down a goodly bunch that normally don't belong to 'em.

Consequently, whatever flopping

TO SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

Quite naturally you are thinking almost constantly of your boys, now overseas or somewhere in training camps in this country, but don't let time slip away so that you will forget to do an important thing you are now being told to do.

Christmas seems a long way off, or maybe Christmas doesn't seem so important to you this year. Well, it means a lot to that boy overseas, and his Christmas will be spoiled if you delay sending those presents too long. The Army and Navy have said that parcels must be mailed between October 1 and November 1, but Post Office officials tell us some parents are already mailing their packages to avoid the rush. And don't forget that perishables won't keep, that the package probably will be subjected to rough handling, and that a heavy weight probably will be placed on top of it somewhere or other along the line.

may occur in November will be apt to be predominantly in the Republicans' direction.

Little Excitement

Yet if there were due to be a big turnover, the campaign ought to have been a lot hotter than it's yet developed into. A doubtful-looking political fight usually excites the rival animals. Where the result's mutually accepted as a foregone conclusion the "ins" don't exert themselves to STAY in, and the "outs" admit, in advance, that it's nearly hopeless for 'em to try to BREAK in.

That seems to be the dope this time.

The Republican congressmen's pro-war and anti-New Deal proclamation may indicate that its subscribers are ambitious to STAY in, but it's to be borne in mind that they're "ins" already and are adopting all necessary precautions to remain so, the Democrats simultaneously recognizing that those are districts they haven't much chance to horn into; hence not bothering with 'em.

A queer thing is that an American wartime election tends to be tame. The question then is, "Shall we go into it?" We always do. And a post-war election is full of ferocity, for then the howl is, "These cannibals GOT us into it!"

But while the war's on, the screech is, "Solidarity!"

To what extent a mixture of the war and the New Deal will effect the situation is problematic. Nov. 3 will tell us. It's unprecedented.

A lighted whistle buoy is more like a floating light house than anything else. It weighs several tons, is moored to war ships at sea, and operates a flashing light. The siren is operated by suction, created by the rise and fall of the buoy in the water. The device costs about $6,000.

These safety devices are important to coastal vessels, especially to vessels running without lights during war time. Facts About the Chronic Arthritis of Middle Age

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE PRINCIPAL differences between the two common forms of chronic joint disease, generally called arthritis, are in the age incidence and in the cause. The form which occurs in young people and among the doctors, can be proved to account for all features of the condition. All that is known is that it occurs mostly in the weight-bearing joints and mostly in overweight, so we assume that with age the joints lose their vitality and begin to degenerate. It is the old phrase, "carrying weight for age."

No One Treatment Specific

Under treatment, the victim sooner or later finds out that there is no one treatment that is specific. The entire body and the habits of life must be treated.

Body mechanics can be corrected, posture improved by exercise, proper rest positions and better shoes, and this is a plainly logical treatment in view of the fact that the weight-bearing joints are most affected.

The blood supply of the joints must be improved by heat, massage, rest and baths. The reason my friends feel stiff on foggy mornings is because their joint circulation is poor.

Diet is of little importance. If an arthritis is overweight, he should be reduced; if underweight, his nutrition improved.

After one of these patients has swallowed about a ton of vitamins, he finds he has been gypped.

Heat is the elderly arthritis's best friend.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

E. G.:—What is diverticulitis, and what is the treatment. Is it a common disease?

Answer: In the large intestine of middle age to elderly people, due to weakness of bowel wall, pouches sometimes form. These are called diverticula. They may never cause any trouble; sometimes they get little stones in them and get an infection called diverticulitis. It is fairly common after the age of 50.

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

MRS. KILCRAN'S face had a strained look that was all the whiter for a cerise lip rouge unevenly applied, as if by a shaking hand. She looked as if she hadn't slept in a long time. Barbara felt pity stir in her.

Claire Kilcran said, "Mrs. Wister, I must talk to you alone."

"We are quite alone," Barbara said, showing her into the living room.

Claire plunged, with a bravery she did not feel:

"Last night something rather serious happened, Mrs. Wister."

"How did you know?" Claire's eyes were wild with alarm.

"The sheriff was here this morning."

A tremor ran over the older woman. "Does he know?"

"He thinks I did it. I am to go to his office at 1 o'clock."

"But you . . . ?"

Barbara said, "I'll tell you everything I know. I saw Pam drive away from here at midnight. I thought she'd come to pay a late call. I wouldn't have thought that it was unusual if she had my car. She's often borrowed it."

"She took it because it was snowing and the top was down on her car. She hates to get wet," Claire offered, as if it were of any importance.

"We must be calm about this, Mrs. Kilcran, and between us, we'll find . . ."

"Has Pamela told you anything about WHY she was out last night?" Claire broke in sharply.

"I don't know anything except what I've told you. I don't know where she was—or why."

Claire became instantly more poised. "Pam told me everything. Poor child, she was terrified."

"I'm sure she was."

"She's only a child, Mrs. Wister. She's made a childish mistake, but what could she do?"

Barbara suddenly saw quite clearly what Pam must do, and was quite certain she would do it.

"She's only 19," Claire continued, "and she has her life before her. She expects to marry and live here, Mrs. Wister, in the town she loves and in which she is loved. The people here call her the Kilcran princess."

Barbara nodded, her eyes on the other woman's face.

"Mrs. Wister!" Mrs. Kilcran's eyes were appealing. "I love my little girl. I'd do anything for her. I . . . I didn't realize that until trouble came along."

Barbara felt a shaft of warmth go out to her.

"I know very well what it would mean to her in the future in this town if the people here learned what she had done. They would not forgive her easily. It is, after all, unpardonable to run away after . . . after such an accident."

Barbara said, "Yes, it is, but I don't expect that Pam will."

Claire's face lost its softness. She said firmly, "I have persuaded her to do everything in the world to her—to be loved here. It means nothing to you."

At first Barbara didn't realize the sense of Claire Kilcran's last phrase. And when it did, she was shaken by a storm of anger. Her tongue felt so stiff she couldn't speak.

"I am prepared to make it worth your while. There'll be a generous settlement for the old man and a check for you for $10,000, as well as a guarantee that the case will be dropped," Claire was saying as she took a checkbook and pen from her purse.

"Mrs. Kilcran!" Barbara's voice seemed to come out astrally and she simply couldn't form any other words.

"You are a young woman," Claire told her, shaking her fountain pen, "with no ties here. I know a great deal about you, Mrs. Wister. With $10,000 you can go elsewhere and . . ."

Barbara's face stopped her abruptly. Barbara was saying, "Do you think I would take money for . . . for . . ."

Claire's eyes narrowed slightly. "So that's it," she said.

Barbara found she could speak clearly then, her anger under control. With great dignity, she said, "I don't know what you think it is, Mrs. Kilcran. I happen to have a very deep feeling of . . . of affection for Pam. . . . You just said that you'd do anything for her. I'm remembering that and so I can forgive you for insulting me."

"You forgiving ME?" Claire's voice was outraged, but after a moment of scrutiny her eyes fell. Not before Barbara saw that they were filled with tears.

There was silence for a long time. Then Mrs. Kilcran spoke in a tone that was not quite steady. "Mrs. Wister, you and my husband are in love. . . . Mr. Kilcran is a powerful man in this town—in this state. He can crush any thing."

"What was this incredible woman getting at?"

"I, too, am in love with him. But I've lost him. However, I haven't lost my daughter. For the first time in our lives we are close together. I shall always have Pam. For her sake, I will give Tom a divorce if you will agree to . . ."

Barbara didn't mean to, but there she was laughing, hysterical laughter rippling up from her throat. Laughter that was broken off as abruptly as it began.

"Mrs. Kilcran," she said, "you are the most stupid woman I ever knew. Claire could actually feel her figure getting smaller before what was in Barbara Wister's face. Weakly she asked, "Wh-what do you mean?"

"I'm going to let you find out for yourself—which is more than you deserve. Now I want you to take me to Pam."

Of course she had to go to Pam. The little thing that had been knocking at the door of her mind was quite clear. Pam must tell Tony. She couldn't marry a man like Tony with a secret like this in her life. It was no longer a question of her debt to Pam.

She found Pam in bed. Pam protesting that she hadn't meant to hurt Barbara, that she was too confused and scared to think for herself.

"You don't know . . ." she said, "But you're going to tell me," Barbara said, sitting down on the side of the bed and stroking back the soft babyish hair from Pam's forehead.

"I'll tell you and you'll help me, won't you, Barbara?"

Barbara's heart felt heavy because she knew that she must answer. "Yes, I'll help you. Begin at the beginning."

"It began a long time ago—" It was such a pitifully young story. The child, not yet woman; the mother, a childish person. The beaux who saw only the mother, and treated Pamela like a little girl. The coming of the young Italian, posing as a Spaniard, with a title and no money, who did not treat Pam as a child.

"He couldn't see me for dust at first," Pam said. "I was mad about him. Until . . . well, I'm coming to that. All of a sudden he began paying attention to me, slipping notes to me, asking me to meet him at strange places so mother wouldn't know."

"When he discovered you weren't a child?"

Pam's young face hardened. "No," she said shortly. "When he discovered mother didn't have . . . well, that some day I'll be Dad's mistress."

"Oh, I see," Barbara murmured, looking at the crystal clock on the table.

"I wasn't even thinking of marriage. I just wanted to be in love. Nicky proposed and I turned him down. Then he got nasty and told me why I had to marry him."

Barbara felt her anxiety like a knife in her. "Was there any reason?" she asked.

Here's How G-Men Learn To Snare Spies

By JOHN GROVER

(Wide World News Service)
QUANTICO, Va.—When FBI agents quickly juggled those eight Nazi spies landed by submarine, it didn't surprise anybody in a little red schoolhouse here—they planned it that way.

This little red schoolhouse is the FBI Academy, where new agents are trained to put a fast snatch on saboteurs and spies before they can disrupt our war production. So far, they're batting a thousand.

When you first see it, the FBI academy doesn't look much bigger than a healthy grade school. It's tucked in one corner of the U. S. Marine base. Actually, it's our No. 1 arsenal in the battle against Axis undercover agents, an educational "factory" specializing in mass production of trained counter-espionage agents.

12-Week Curriculum

Already the academy has earned the name "West Point of law enforcement." It's small in size, but they cram a lot of learning into little space. Its 12-week curriculum is rated equal to a two-year college course. Classes run 12 hours a day. The need for trained agents to combat the sabotage threat is that urgent.

Its basic tenet of the FBI credo that an officer must know more than his quarry to catch him. So they study sabotage methods here, with all the care a pre-med student takes to learn anatomy. Bombs are dissected, incendiary pencils, poisons.

The physical training curriculum puts them through jiu-jitsu, mass exercises and specialized work in handling armed criminals.

In addition, they must carry a heavy schedule of academic studies, including criminal law, communications, chemistry, criminal identification, photography and the other scientific skills that make the FBI invisible writing and the other tools of the spy trade are analyzed. It's drilled into new agents that the time to catch a saboteur is before he gets started on his deadly chores.

They must learn the lesson. In contrast to the epidemic of explosions in World War I, not a single instance of organized sabotage has interfered with U. S. munitions production this time.

Anti-sabotage training is only part of the FBI "West Point" course. Forty-five new agents, all graduate lawyers or accountants, enter the academy every week. They have to become proficient in using rifles, shotguns, pistols, submachine guns and tear gas weapons. They've got to shoot right or left-handed, from the hips from around corners. The gunnery course is designed to teach them close-quarters, quick-action shooting.

The physical training curriculum puts them through jiu-jitsu, mass exercises and specialized work in handling armed criminals.

In addition, they must carry a heavy schedule of academic studies, including criminal law, communications, chemistry, criminal identification, photography and the other scientific skills that make the FBI the best-trained set of cops in the world.

Before the academy was planned—it was a project personally supervised by Director J. Edgar Hoover—observers were sent abroad to Scotland Yard, the French Surete and other hotshot detective bureaus. They found that FBI methods already equaled or better the techniques of foreign contemporaries.

When we first began to worry about spies and sabotage, there were only 900 FBI agents. By stepping up the academy course, the number of trained field agents was boosted to 3,500 at the beginning of 1942, and more are being graduated every week.

When you read of spy roundups where the Axis agents were tossed in the pokey before they could get rid of their seals after landing, remember the little red schoolhouse where the FBI agents acquired their know-how. Uncle Sam was ready ahead of time.

Lost and found columns of Tokyo newspapers are crowded these days. Every time an American buys a War Bond, the Japs lose face. Buy your 10c every pay day.

MACKENZIE GOES ABROAD TO ANALYZE THE WAR FOR RECORD-HERALD READERS

correspondents' headquarters like that one—and probably never will be again. These men, some of whom were veterans of several wars, were virtually members of the General Staff. They were allowed the run of the battle front, and whenever a British offensive was to be undertaken, they were called in and given even the most minute details of the projected attack. As the action progressed and after it was finished, the various points of interest were discussed and criticized at joint meetings of the Big Seven and staff officers. It was a grand school of applied military science such as few men have the privilege of attending.

Mackenzie spent several weeks in Egypt at headquarters of General Sir Archibald Murray, then British Near East commander, and eye-witnessed important fighting around the Suez Canal. Murray's aide, Captain John Yardley, says in his reminiscences "Mackenzie's dispatches, not only from Egypt but from other theaters of war, were the most potent written, for they lifted the veil and revealed to the American public the true facts."

Mackenzie joined The Associated Press in New York in 1910 after two years of newspaper work in upstate New York. He started his war correspondence covering the 1916 rebellion in Ireland—and was nearly shot for his pains. He roared into Dublin in a hired car at 10 o'clock one night, blithely unaware that the city was under a curfew and anyone outdoors was liable to be shot. A barrage of bullets stopped the car. For a half hour, at

60th Wedding Anniversary To Be Observed on Sunday By Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Fults

Although married 60 years ago Thursday on October 1, 1882, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Fults, residing on the CCC Highway a mile west of Washington C. H., will not celebrate their sixtieth anniversary until Sunday, when some of their children and other relatives will be at home for a family dinner. The celebration will be a very quiet one.

Mr. and Mrs. Fults, two of the county's most highly respected citizens, were married at the First Presbyterian rectory here, by Rev. S. J. Miller, and they were accompanied by J. P. Bush and Loten W. Chaffin, both of whom passed away a number of years ago.

Although born in Auglaize County, Mr. Fults moved to this county when quite young, and has spent his entire life here, part of the time in farming, but for the past 40 years he has been engaged in gardening at his "Sunshine Gardens" west of here. They have lived in their present location for 43 years.

A few years ago Mrs. Fults lost her sight, but has accepted her great misfortune with a wonderful spirit of bravery and cheerfulness that is most commendable.

When they obtained their license to wed, it was issued in the old brick courthouse, most of which was a one-story structure flush with the sidewalk on Court Street. Judge McElwain issued the license and Mr. Fults recalls that Judge McElwain said to them:

"I hope you'll never need another license."

Mr. and Mrs. Fults have two sons and two daughters, Mrs. Herman Action, of Milledgeville; an informal drumhead "court martial" he and his driver stood—arms upstretched, bayonet points at their waists. The British officers were not at all impressed with Mackenzie's American credentials. They were convinced he and the Irish driver were rebels. (The driver, Mackenzie found out later, was). To avoid responsibility of executing them, the officers ordered them to drive to Kingstown, seven miles away—a virtual death sentence because the road was lined with quick-shooting troops. Mackenzie managed to get through the gauntlet unscathed by having the driver turn on all his lights, blow his horn steadily and drive slowly to avoid suspicion. The next day, in the safety of daylight, Mackenzie straightened out his identity with the authorities, who interned him until he admitted he was ready to return to England.

Conservative in clothes, conversation and conduct, Mackenzie is rather at loss to account for the abandon with which he navigated the hazards of war. Sir Philip Gibbs marvels in one of his books at the way Mackenzie and William Philip Simms, during one of the worst bombardments of World War I, refused to abandon their card game. At another time, Gibbs discovered Mackenzie calmly typing out a literary melodrama entitled, "The Girl in the Mask." Subsequently it attained magazine-serial and book success in England. Mackenzie also wrote "Hell's Kitchen," a story of the London underworld based on the reminiscences of England's greatest burglar, George Ingram, who happened into The AP office in London one night after the war.

Mackenzie was in London when British Premier Chamberlain made his dramatic dash by air to Hitler's retreat at Berchtesgaden—and flew after him. Mackenzie later covered the fateful conferences between Hitler and Chamberlain at Godesberg and Munich, and accompanied Hitler into Czechoslovakia over flower-strewn roads when the Reich annexed Sudetenland.

Mackenzie's fan mail is of three kinds—(1) requests to discuss certain topics; (2) praise, and (3) complaints that he is pro-this and pro-that.

As long as the squawks come from both sides, he is content.

Frank Fults, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Warren W. Young, of the Robinson Road, and Charles B. Fults, of this county. Mr. Fults was 84 years old in May and Mrs. Fults 82 in March.

During the last quarter of a century or more, Mr. and Mrs. Fults have eaten no meat, their diet being confined exclusively to fruits and vegetables.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Fults have been blessed with unusually good health until Mrs. Fults was stricken with loss of her sight.

Lions Club Party And Dance Honor Past Presidents

Thirty members and their lady guests enjoyed the very lovely party honoring the past presidents of the Lions Club, and given by that organization on Tuesday evening.

The affair was staged in the Washington Country Club, where numerous Lion insignias and their two colors, purple and gold, decorated the spacious lounge and dining room. Flowers of the two combined colors, adorned every possible place and added to the charm of the evening.

Launching the evening's pleasures was the elaborate three-course dinner, served by Mrs. Hazel Devins, the club hostess. The menu was of particularly delicious viands, and with the interspersing of clever toasts and hilarity, the dinner hour was extremely gay. One long table seated the guests of honor and their wives, and was beautifully centered with a low watergarden holding a profusion of purple and gold blooms. At the past presidents table were Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Hire, Mr. and Mrs. J. Roush Burton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Craig, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Enslin, Mr. and Mrs. Norman L. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Sam R. Parrett, and Mr. R. B. Tharp.

The president, Mr. John Sagar, was a very capable toastmaster and introduced the past presidents, who made brief and amusing responses. Of interest to all members, was the presence of Mr. Warren L. Young, of Franklin, who is the district governor. Mr. Young gave a short and impressive talk, followed by several remarks made by his district secretary, Mr. William McIntyre. After the dinner hour, cards were enjoyed and dancing to the club's music box held the guests until a late hour.

Miss Marie Carolyn Katz Is September Bride of Corporal Laurel Wolfe Stein

In quiet dignity and utmost beauty, Miss Marie Carolyn Katz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Katz, of 1592 Bryden Road, Columbus, and Corporal Laurel Wolfe Stein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Stein, of Hartford City, Indiana, were united in marriage Tuesday morning at eleven forty-five o'clock.

The single ring ceremony was performed by Rabbi Kaplan, in the Seneca Hotel, Columbus, with only the immediate families and a few close friends in attendance.

The radiant bride was extremely lovely in her very stunning fall suit of green wool, with pink trim, and with which she wore a gold blouse. Brown accessories completed her costume.

Mrs. Leonard Manekin, of 2630 Sherwood Road, Columbus, was matron of honor and had selected a toast wool dress, with black accessories.

Major Henry Katz of Camp Van Dorn, Miss., brother of the bride, acted as best man for Corp. Stein.

Mrs. Katz was handsomely gowned for her daughter's marriage in a lovely plum crepe model with gold nail head trim. Mrs. Manekin had chosen a becoming black crepe gown with gold trim.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held for the wedding party. A very tempting collation was served from a beautifully decorated table. The centerpiece was an artistic arrangement of white mums and fern. Adorning every other point were masses of russet and gold mums in graceful arrangements.

The bride is a lovely girl, gifted in unusual brunette beauty and personality. She graduated from Washington High School, after which she moved to Columbus with her parents. Since then she has been with the Fashion Co. She has many friends here, where she was exceptionally popular with both the younger and older social sets.

The bridegroom graduated from Hartford City High School, and International Business School, Ft. Wayne, Ind. He is now with the O. U. T. C. Band at Camp Perry, where he is saxophonist and clarinetist.

HEAD OF STATE GRANGE SPEAKS TUESDAY NIGHT

Selden Grange's 'Booster' Night Outstanding In Interest

The annual "Booster" meeting of Selden Grange was held Tuesday night with Paul McNish, Master of the Ohio State Grange, giving the main address.

McNish said in part:

"The successful termination of the war in which we are now engaged requires our farms to produce the food to maintain our armies in the field and our civilian population at home, as well as to help supply our Allies, in order to do this, agriculture must be accorded the same consideration that is granted to industry and other war production."

"The parity formula is wrong because it is founded on a wrong premise. It takes the period of 1909-14 as the standard on which calculations are based while in truth conditions have changed so much on so many different things since that time, that the parity formula is largely out of date."

As an example he quoted a member of the Executive Committee of the Ohio State Grange, who has kept farm records for over thirty years, as saying that during the period 1909-14 he bought a corn planter for the receipts from 2.2 hogs, while today, with the so called "inflated" price of meat it requires 4.4 hogs, of the same weight and grade, just twice as much pork, to purchase the same make and type of corn planter.

He quoted from the Grange Manual, "No nation has ever prospered for any length of time that did not have a prosperous agriculture."

He further said: "To win the war and write a just peace will require statesmanship in agriculture; statesmanship on the part of the consumer; statesmanship on the part of labor and statesmanship by the government. And finally with all of this, religious principles must be included in the foundations of the peace terms if it is to last. This comprehends the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, a basic Grange principle since its founding."

A delightful account of the recent 4-H Club Congress at Ohio State University was given by Miss Betty Jones.

The audience greatly appreciated two patriotic tenor solos by W. S. Paxson, who was accompanied by Mrs. Paxson.

The kitchen and dining room arrangements for the supper preceding the program were in charge of Mrs. Mary Conner and Mrs. Elsa Rowe.

PRICE OF HAIRCUTS IS NOW 50 CENTS

Increase from 40 Cents Is Announced Here

War prices have reached haircuts in this city, with the result that some of the leading barbers are now charging 50 cents for haircuts.

For several years the price has been 40 cents, and prior to that it was 35 cents. Still earlier 25 cents was the price. In fact at least one barber has been charging 25 cents.

The price of shaves remains the same—20 cents.

NO ARRESTS MADE OVER TUESDAY NIGHT

Tuesday night was an unusually quiet one for the police for no arrests were made during the night.

It is the first night for some time that not a single arrest for intoxication or other minor offense, has been made.

RATION BOARD HERE GETS SET FOR NEW TASK

Rubber Work Boots and Shoes Frozen in Hands Of Dealers for 5 Days

Fayette County's War Price and Rationing Board today was getting set to take on additional duties now that the War Production Board has frozen for five days stocks of rubber work shoes and boots preparatory to rationing them to key workers, W. L. O'Brien, the chairman of the board, said Wednesday.

At the end of the five-day frozen period, the chairman said, the board would receive applications for purchases. Certificates for purchase, he added, will be issued to workers whose jobs are "essential to the war or to public health and safety."

The rationing system was likened to that used for tires by the chairman. Purchases will be required to turn in worn out rubbers when they get new ones, it was said. The old rubbers, it was explained, will go into the scrap pile. This plan is not untried either; it is used in the sale of toothpaste and shaving cream in collapsible metal tubes.

Just how many rubber shoes and boots are in the stocks frozen here is not known. Neither has the Rationing Board any idea of how much of a task the new rationing order will create.

Announcing the order yesterday, WPB explained that ordinary rubbers, arctics, gaiters and women's and children's rubber boots, mostly made from reclaimed rubber, will not be rationed at this time.

The order, the government's first affecting rationing of clothing, resulted from a mounting demand from industrial and agricultural workers for rubber boots and rubber work shoes requiring a high content of crude rubber.

GUARD COMPANY HERE IS TIED IN WITH DEFENSE

County's Civilian Council And Company's Officers Coordinate Program

Methods by which the Ohio State Guard, both through the unit here under command of Capt. W. B. Hyer, and through the state organization, can cooperate with the Fayette County Council of Civilian Defense, were discussed at length Tuesday at a special meeting of the executive committee of the county defense council with Col. Earl Brannon of the Ohio adjutant general's office. Col. Brannon is an executive officer in charge of the Ohio State Guard activities. Capt. Hyer and Lieut. Condon Campbell accompanied him to the conference.

The Ohio State Guard comes into the civilian defense picture at any time upon request from the county civilian defense council.

It is under direct orders of the governor of the state and can be sent from one community to another, but is not permitted to leave the state except by orders of the governor. It is under instructions however to be of any service possible to defense councils.

Col. Brannon explained that the Ohio State Guard also has experts who will come into a city or county upon request of the defense council and give demonstrations on how to handle incendiary or other bombs, also to give demonstrations arranged in advance to the public on detecting different kinds of gases which may be used in bombing, together with instructions on what to do in case of such gas bombs being dropped.

When defense councils are ready to ask it, the state guard organization also will send a force into the city to simulate an air raid and assist defense councils in meeting problems which rise from such a rehearsal. It was suggested that such an event may be arranged here at a later date after proper preparations and organization rehearsals are held under direction of the defense council.
